

Practical Body Massage Routine Notes

Use the wide margins to make your own notes.

Preparation to massage

To achieve a professional therapist / client relationship the aim of any therapist is to inspire trust through competence and confidence, combined with a caring and considerate attitude.

Remember:

HYGIENE is of utmost importance - always clean your hands:

- At the start of the treatment
- Before giving a face massage
- After the treatment

Before the treatment:

- Prepare treatment area. Ensure you have all your equipment ready at hand.
- Always use a good quality massage oil
- Take receiver's consultation and explain / discuss with receiver the treatment
- Ensure the receiver is well enough to receive a treatment –check for contra-indications
- Ensure you have removed all jewelry (except wedding ring) - receiver and therapist
- Ensure you have covered any open cuts with a plaster - receiver and therapist
- Help receiver onto the couch - prone position (on their front / face-downward)
- Place bolsters under feet and position receiver's body - ensure they are comfortable and warm
- Do your body scan
- Wet wipe their feet
- Wash hands
- Get connected
- Slowly cat paw their body from feet to shoulders-indicating the start of the treatment

During the treatment:

- Link each stroke together and maintain an even flow and rhythm throughout the treatment
- Maintain contact at all times unless there is a natural break within the routine
- Observe correct towel technique at all times, protecting your clients modesty
- Check for comfort, pressure and warmth throughout the treatment
- Give clear instructions

After the treatment

- Energy connection
- Wash your hands
- Help them sit up on the couch and offer a glass of water
- Give them your findings
- Discuss treatment plan
- Give aftercare advice
- Discuss healing crisis
- Show a stretch

After Care Advice

Aftercare advice is an important part of any treatment. It offers completion and support to the receiver, ensuring that they get the most out of the received treatment

Advise the receiver to:

- Drink 6-8 glasses of water following a treatment to help flush out the toxins that have been released
- Avoid alcohol or any other stimulants for at least 12 hours after the treatment
- Rest after the treatment to allow the body to heal and settle
- Only eat a light meal before and after a treatment - If the body is using energy to digest a heavy meal, it is not putting its energy into healing.
- No exercise
- Explain to the receiver the possible contra-action symptoms (healing crisis) they may experience after the treatment and ensure them that this is normal and will subside within 12 hours

Encourage the receiver to:

- Have regular treatments to prevent illness and maintain a state of wellbeing
- Use skin care products that do not strip the skin's natural oils
- Take time out to relax and combat the negative effects of stress
- Eat generally healthy and take up regularly exercise

Massage techniques and effects

The effect a massage has on the body depends on the combination of strokes, the style of movement, the pressure and speed used in a massage. The following list is intended as a guideline, not as an absolute, as each person has individual needs and with some treatments and some clients different effects may result and the styles may be used differently.

- Superficial movement: Soothing, relaxing, preparatory & concluding
- Gentle movement: Soothing, relaxing, preparatory & concluding, used over delicate, sensitive & painful areas
- Deep movement: Relaxing, tension release, pain reliever over muscular areas
- Brisk movement: Stimulating, pain reliever over muscular areas
- Light pressure: Stimulating, pain reliever over sensitive and tender areas
- Firm pressure: Relaxing, tension-release, pain reliever over muscular areas
- Slow movement: Soothing, relaxing, preparatory & concluding, used over delicate sensitive & painful areas
- Fast movement: Stimulating, pain reliever over muscular areas
- Linking Strokes: To maintain the feeling of continuity and flow during a treatment it is sometimes necessary to insert a linking stroke
- A linking stroke is a gentle stroking motion with one or both hands to maintain physical contact, between completion of one stroke and commencement of another.
- They are intuitive and optional on the part of the giver, but will enhance the treatment for both the receiver and giver.

Healing crisis

- Increased thirst
- Increased urination
- Headaches or achiness
- Runny nose
- Heightened emotional state
- This will disappear anywhere from 12-48 hours.
- This is normal as the body is getting rid of toxins
